Gospel Reflection

On this Divine Mercy Sunday, we are called to reflect on the profound message of forgiveness and reconciliation that the resurrected Jesus brings to his disciples. The resurrected Jesus seems to suddenly appear out of nowhere, even though the doors are locked. He is not the same as he was, but he is also not a ghost. He does not dwell on their abandonment and betrayal, but instead focuses on calming their fears and commissioning them to continue his mission of forgiveness and reconciliation. He calms their fears.

It is striking to note that Jesus does not simply offer forgiveness and reconciliation as an abstract concept or an individual spiritual experience. Instead, he calls his disciples to live in community and to work for right relationships within that community and beyond. The restoration of all creation must include God, all people, and even the natural world. Then he comes back and lovingly helps Thomas, who was not with them to overcome his doubts.

For us today, this mission of forgiveness and reconciliation must start within our own communities. We must strive to live in harmony with one another, to overcome division and conflict, and to work towards the common good. This is not always an easy task, as we are all flawed and prone to sin. However, we can draw inspiration and strength from the example of the early Church, which was able to live in remarkable unity despite the challenges it faced.

As Catholics, we are also called to extend this message of forgiveness and reconciliation to the wider world. We are called to be agents of healing in a broken world, to work towards justice and peace, and to bring the light of Christ to all those we encounter. Let us pray for the grace to live out this mission of forgiveness and reconciliation in our own lives and in the world around us. May we be instruments of God's mercy and love, bringing healing and hope to all those we meet.

Reflection Questions

- In what ways do you struggle with doubt and fear in your relationship with God? How can you bring these doubts and questions to Jesus, and allow his peace to calm your fears?
- How do you respond to situations of conflict or division in your relationships with others? Are there ways that you can approach these situations with greater empathy, understanding, and a willingness to forgive?
- In what ways can you live out the mission of forgiveness and reconciliation in your daily life? How can you work towards greater harmony and unity in your community and in the world around you?
